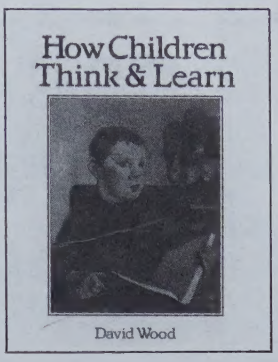
How Children Think and Learn
DAVID WOOD



'Realistic and practical rather than idealistic and distant, this book deals with the core issues without either oversimplifying the psychology or ignoring the realities of the classroom. The text should be essential reading for any would-be teachers and for . . . practising teachers.'
Peter Robinson, University of Bristol
248 pages, £25.00 (hardback) 0–631–16138–4
£7.95 (paperback) 0–631–16139–2

Learning Science
RICHARD T. WHITE

'This book restores to teachers in general, and to science teachers in particular, a sense of their true purpose and worth. It also provides a wise and lucid guide to ways in which they can improve their service to their pupils and to the community. It is even, dammit, the sort of book which might attract thoughtful people into science teaching.'
New Scientist
224 pages, £25.00 (hardback)) 0–631–15698–4
£7.95 (paperback) 0–631–15699–2

Becoming a Skilled Reader
JANE OAKHILL and ALAN GARNHAM

'This brief and readable book is a striking achievement . . . The authors are to be congratulated on giving us such a vivid account of a vast area of research. Anyone concerned with reading – from teacher to researcher – will need to read this book.' P.N. Johnson-Laird 224 pages, £27.50 (hardback) 0–631–15244–X

Learning to be Literate
Children's Spoken and Written Language
ALISON GARTON and CHRIS PRATT

This book describes and explains the development of children's spoken and written language skills. Throughout, the authors emphasise the importance of the context in which the skills of literacy are learned and the child's active involvement in this considerable achievement.
